

Parents FLAG Edmonton

JUNE 1995

NEXT "MEETING":

SATURDAY, JUNE 24

NOON

GAZEBO PARK

(Calgary Trail South & 83 Ave)

The 1995 annual Gay Pride Parade and Picnic gives all gay and gay positive people the opportunity to express their caring in a visible, highly supportive manner.

In the words of Marilyn Cass of PFLAG, Seattle-Tacoma, "We'll walk behind our banner that proclaims who we are and makes a powerful and visible statement to the entire straight community that we love our gay and lesbian kids. For me, this day is one of the most exciting, moving and empowering experiences of the year! The cheer that rises as we move forward along the route is certainly proof that PFLAG's efforts and presence are greatly valued. The waves and shouts of "Thanks Mom, Thanks Dad," and the occasional bystander who breaks out of the crowd to run and hug a marching parent or friend is a visible sign that family ties are (or should be) the most enduring bonds...Then, like no other time, I stand taller and stronger in the power of being "out".

The PFLAG PICNIC follows immediately after the parade at Queen Elizabeth Park. Delicious hot dogs and thirst-quenching cold drinks will be sold. For info:

IT'S A GAY LIFE!

JUNE 1995

MEL WHITE: THEOLOGIAN

Mel White has told my story and that of thousands of evangelical gay Christians: the terrified youth, the prayers for deliverance, the belated introduction to the concept of social justice, the inauthentic marriage, the suicidal depressions, the same-sex affair, the divorce, and at long last, the authentic relationship.

Virginia Ramey
Mollenkott, WRITER

"Jerry Falwell and I had just flown into San Jose, California. We were driving in our limousine to church when we were cut off by a huge demonstration of gay people. They were angry because Jerry had said that AIDS was God's punishment on gays. As we went through the crowd, Jerry said, 'Thank God for these gay demonstrators. If I didn't have them to draw a crowd, I'd have to hire 'em. They give me all the attention I need.' I wanted to be outside demonstrating and there I was sitting inside the car. That was my point of shame.

Dr. Mel White told his wife he is gay the year they were married. With her support, he underwent exorcisms, ex-gay reparative therapy, and electric shock. Nothing worked. Eventually, he found himself hanging out around the corner from the West Hollywood Metropolitan Community Church, trying to get the courage to go in. By the time he finally went into MCC for the first time, White had developed an illustrious career as a ghost writer for such luminaries of the religious right as Billy Graham, Pat Robertson, Jerry Falwell, and Jim and Tammy Faye Bakker. He began leading more and more of a double life, and while still writing for Falwell, joined the Act Up demonstration at St. Patrick's Cathedral.

Then he did the unthinkable and came out to his former colleagues, including Falwell, Robertson and Oliver North. Now none of them will speak to him. White had hopes for Billy Graham, but Graham has remained silent. "He didn't attack gay people, even when he sermonized on Sodom and Gomorrah," says White, "but he did a big rally in Portland, Oregon before the vote on anti-gay Proposition 9. I tried to get him to speak out against it, but he didn't say anything. He says he's not a political figure. I told him that justice is a spiritual issue and his silence was aiding injustice."

White doesn't mind getting arrested every once in a while during demonstrations, and doesn't miss his old high-powered career at all. "Even if I were just ghost-writing autobiographies," he says, "I'd be part of the team that supports the enemy. As long as we stay closeted in homophobic churches, playing the organ, leading the choir, and giving our money, that's what we're doing: supporting the enemy. And keeping hate alive.

White is now dean of the Cathedral of Hope Metropolitan Community Church in Dallas, Texas, America's largest gay and lesbian congregation. He monitors the religious right and is creating an outreach for gay and lesbian people. And his message is hitting the mark. After CNN broadcast the Cathedral of Hope's 1993 Christmas Eve Service, requests for help and information flooded in from throughout the world.

ELUSIVE SPRING

Springtime plays her little game
Of peekaboo each year.
Now you see her; now you don't-
When next will she appear?

She's warm; she's cold; she's in between.
She's never what you guessed!
You start your day with coats and hats;
By noon your over dressed.

When pleasant days arrive at last,
You grab your gardening hoe.
"Gotcha!" says elusive spring.
"Next week, I'm sending snow!"
